

DRAMATIC AND LYRIC

The "Out of Darkness" Matinee Yesterday.

THE LYCEUM CO'S REPERTOIRE.

Who Shall succeed Booth and Anderson—Stephen Mack Agnew—Lindsay's New Play—Thomas' New Venture.

R. ROYLE'S play, "Out of Darkness," drew a good matinee house yesterday and closed its season. Full twenty minutes were saved in the representation over the previous performance, and this was a decided benefit to the play. But it is still too long, especially in the last act. The matinee situation occurs at the end of the third act, and after that everything ought to be wound up with a rush. We offer a suggestion, too, that some of the profanity be eliminated from the play. An occasional "damn" in the mouth of a choleric person like Paley, senior, is well enough, but the frequency of the damns and other expressions of a kindred nature are altogether too great.

At the matinee yesterday there was a great deal of applause and several calls—a rare thing at a performance in which the audience is made up almost entirely of ladies. Everyone in the cast was better than before, and the strong situation at the end of the third act went with much finer effect. The receipts of the two performances were about $500.

We understand that both Mr. Royle and Mr. Henderson go out with Salvini next season, but Mr. Royle will leave for the east as early as possible with a view to having his play read by New York managers. Now that it has passed through the crucible of a production, there should be less difficulty in obtaining a hearing for it than before, and all Mr. Royle's friends will watch with interest the result of his labors. There are few more difficult tasks than that of inducing the average manager to take up an untried play—there are too many English and French productions whose strength has been proven—but with the notices "Out of Darkness" has secured it will be strange if Mr. Royle does not find his way very greatly cleared.

Even Stephens has returned from his trip to the coast greatly improved in health and looking as brown as an Apache. He says he fought shy of music in San Francisco and saw nothing of moment in any place of amusement. The Lyceum company in "The Idler." It is only a few weeks before the chorus society will resume its sessions and Mr. Stephens is busily at work mapping out a plan of campaign.

John S. Lindsay has booked two dates, Sept. 8 and 9, at the theatre, and will send a new play called "The Wage Workers." It is by R. N. Traver, a St. Joe news-paper man, and was written specially for Mr. Lindsay, who will give it a production aided by his own company. He starts his road tour Aug. 17.

The question of how to entertain our visitors at the irrigation convention is coming up in the public mind, and various schemes are suggested. The one that looks most feasible is the plan proposed by Henry Gillespie to have the Choral society give a concert in the tabernacle one night, and the Home Dramatic club a performance in the theatre the next—the irrigation convention being made the guests of each occasion. It is calculated that there will be several hundred visitors, and this plan would probably entertain them and at the same time give them as good an idea of the talent Salt Lake boasts as any other that could be proposed.

The theatre will not be open again until the 19th, when the long expected Lyceum company open a season of five performances, rendering "The Charity Ball" Wednesday, "The Idler" Thursday, "The Wife" Friday, "Old Heads and Young Hearts" Saturday, and "The Charity Ball" for a Saturday matinee. The opportunity of seeing the great players of this company in a round of different characters is a rare one and will be eagerly welcomed. Lemoyne, who we think always deserves the highest mention in this company, as Stoddard does in Palmer's, will have the same sort of part in "The Charity Ball" as in "The Wife." "The Idler" has something new and different, and in the comedy "Old Heads and Young Hearts" he does the famous part of Jesse Kural. Music and Drama says: "W. J. LeMay has made an exceptionally strong hit at the Baldwin as Jesse Kural in 'Old Heads and Young Hearts,' which is one of the cleverest and most delightful performances that has ever been seen in this city. It is perfect, even to the smallest detail, and thoroughly enlisted the sympathies of the audience, who listened with the greatest attention, even to the final syllable of the text, and then insisted on a second view of the final tableau—a mark of appreciation rarely shown by an audience now-a-days."

George Cayvan's parts in "The Wife" and "The Charity Ball" are somewhat similar; she has a strong emotional character, "The Idler" and in the comedy she plays Lady Alice in the costumes of half a century ago. Kelley in this piece does a blue-coated blue-Littleton Coker, Esq.; in the "Charity Ball" she is a clergyman, and in the "Idler" he plays a benevolent villain, of the Captain Swift stripe—only a little rouser. All in all, the season will be worth the Salt Lake look forward to with the keenest pleasure.

In his letters to THE HERALD Bill Nye has touched upon almost every known topic under the sun, except his own play of "The Cad." We see by the eastern papers that its rehearsals began August 17 at the Tremont theatre in Boston and that the play will be produced September 21 in New York city at the Union Square theatre, with Thomas Q. Seabrooke as the star. The new enterprise is to be managed by George W. Lloyd. Mr. Stuart Robson is financially interested, and with Mr. Lloyd came to New York last week to start work on the new scenery. The music is being composed by Brahms. Mr. Nye is to superintend the rehearsals, and so it is that the actors speak the words written by him.

We are glad to see that Mr. Thomas, the author of "Alabama," is to dramatize "Colonel Carter, of Cartersville," and equally glad to note that Em. Holland is named as the man best able to portray the character of the courtly old colonel. The Mirror says: "Augustus Thomas will very likely make an excellent dramatization of 'Colonel Carter, of Cartersville.' He is in sympathy with southern feeling and character, and he will doubtless preserve the spirit of Hopkinson Smith's extremely clever and truthful sketch, while giving it a dramatic element to which the little book makes no pretensions."

"Colonel Carter, if skilfully dramatized and well played, will be a new type to the stage, and one that will win the public heart and fancy."

"But do you think that W. J. Ferguson is likely to interpret the colonel with such degree of excellence as the character demands?"

"Mr. Ferguson is an adroit and amusing eccentric comedian, but hitherto to his best work has been seen in 'Bile.' Give him a short, well-defined character part, and nine times in ten he will make it stand out and score an unmistakable hit."

"But Mr. Ferguson is not equally happy in sustained work of this description. He is apt to over-elaborate, and to grow a trifle monotonous and wearisome."

"I confess there are many actors one can call to mind that would be capable of

PRISONERS ESCAPE

Three Convicts Pass Under the Noses of Four Armed Guards

SECRETED IN A LOAD OF ADOBES

The Notorious Horse Thief and Desperado Wilson is Said to Have Planned the Jail Break.

At 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Warden Vandercook made the discovery that three prisoners had escaped from the penitentiary.

A new outer wall had just been completed, surrounding the entire prison, which it was believed would make escape impossible. The full force of prison life stared at the fact in the face and they put their heads together and devised a plan of escape. They were at work leveling to the ground the old adobe wall that was allowed to stand until the new wall was finished. The sun-dried brick were loaded into a wagon and cart in which they were hauled out through the gate into the ravine on the outside. The convicts saw their opportunity. The wagons were driven by convicts who had gained the confidence of the warden by good behavior. Having secured their co-operation the three prisoners lay flat on the bottom of the wagon, while the drivers loaded it up with brick, completely covering the convicts. As the wagon passed the gate the guard saw nothing but a load of adobes and it was allowed to pass on the wagon was easily eluded.

Among the three prisoners who made their escape was the notorious horse thief Wilson who has been operating through Salt Lake and Utah counties and who is well known to Chicago detectives as one of the most daring desperados that ever cursed that city.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ESCAPED CONVICTS.

Thomas McGillion—Burglary, eight years; sent up in March, light complexion, about twenty-four years old, 5 feet 8 inches high, eyes and hair light brown, weight about 147 pounds. He has on the right forearm the word "Joe" and a small scar on the nose.

W. W. Wilson—Was sent up about a year ago for grand larceny. He has eight counts against one year each. He is dark complexioned, twenty-two years old, 5 feet 11 inch, weight 155 pounds, blue eyes, dark brown hair, the thumb and first two forefingers of the right hand are off at the first joint.

Frank McManus, sentenced at the First district court in Ogden the first part of this year for burglary. He is light complexioned, twenty-five years old, height five feet nine and one-half inches, light blue eyes, brown hair, weight 155 pounds, and has a mole on the right side of the waist. They all had stripes on when they escaped.

FRED. DOUGLASS.

Born in Tuckahoe, Near Easton, Md., in 1817.

The Negro Who Advised President Lincoln to Issue the Emancipation Proclamation.

[FOR THE SUNDAY HERALD.—Copyrighted.] Thursday, August 6, is the anniversary of the emancipation of all slaves in the United States, and it is to be celebrated in Rochester, New York, and in other places in a manner worthy of the occasion. The project was initiated by the Douglass League. It was in Rochester that Frederick Douglass started a paper called the "North Star," afterward Fred Douglass' paper. Frederick Douglass was born in Tuckahoe near Easton, Md., in 1817. His mother was a negro—his father a white man. A slave on a plantation at the age of ten years, he was sent to Baltimore to live with the relatives of his master. He taught himself to read and write in secret. He was employed in a ship yard and fled from Baltimore from slavery in 1838. He came to New York; then he went to New Bedford, Mass., where he married. He labored on wharves and in workshops until 1841, when he attended an anti-slavery convention at Nantucket and made a speech. Afterwards he traveled and lectured in New England and Massachusetts for upwards of four years. He wrote and published his autobiography in 1845. Soon after he went to Europe and lectured in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales to enthusiastic audiences. A subscription of $110 was raised to manumit him. He remained two years in Great Britain. Fearing arrest from his supposed implication in the John Brown raid, he went to Europe again for some months. It was he who suggested the formation of colored regiments, and did much to help all the ranks with his race in Massachusetts. There is little doubt that Frederick Douglass advised President Lincoln to issue the emancipation proclamation. Recently, Douglass was United States minister to Hayti, having previously filled two or three Federal appointments.

THE WORLD OF SPORT.

Sullivan Willing to Try Again—The Williams-Morrissey Fight.

Mike Sullivan has returned from Park City. He says the reason he did not make a better showing was because his friends put up so much money on him that it made him nervous, and besides this, the altitude affected him. He is willing to meet Whalton in this city in a twenty-five round contest, and the men will probably come to a decision again this month.

The all absorbing topic of discussion in sporting circles is the big bill between Jim Williams, of this city, and Morrissey, of Wyoming, which comes off before Douglass Athletic at Ogden, on the night of September 1. The contest will be for the championship of the territory, which is now held by Williams, and a big purse. Morrissey is being trained by La Blanche, and Williams has been getting himself in shape for some time. He will go out to Buffalo Park in a few days and commence a course of training under the Maori. Both men are in fine fettle, and will be it to fight for their lives when they meet in the ring. It is likely that a special train will be run from this city by the Union Pacific for the benefit of those who wish to be at the ring side.

Jimmy Larkin has been matched to fight Jimmy Lynch in New York on September 1. Walter Halligan will challenge the winner.

George Lee, the carman, is authority for the statement that Sid Pritchard, who has just defeated Jack Burke and Jim Smith, will never come to America. He says Pritchard is afraid of the water and the ship has not yet been built that he would sail in.

John Davis has secured the state championship offered by the Burns & Baker Colliery company, which with a purse of $40 will go to the winner of the billiard tournament to be held at the Ogden on Sept. 15. The cue has the handsomest ever seen here. It is made of sixty-two pieces of wood, artistically inlaid.

Col. Kelley is corresponding with George Rorer with a view to having Dixon and Willis give an exhibition here on their way east.

Look out for the grand display of fireworks and ball at Smoot's park on Wednesday, August 13, 1891. Admission to the grounds 25 cents. Best of music.
